

The Gratification of Fostering

Just knowing you have saved these precious lives.

The enjoyment you will receive watching these little lives grow bigger and stronger every day.

The different personalities of each one; and getting to name them.

The enjoyment of watching them at play is much better than TV.

We also get in newborn babies with no mother. These are a little more time consuming. They have to be fed every 3 to 4 hrs. round the clock for a few weeks. You have to help them go to the bathroom, just like mama does. I will help you thru this. But when you have mama there really is nothing much for you to do the first 3 to 4 weeks, mama takes care of them totally. Keep her cage or area clean, litter box etc. She will need good food and lots of it. She will be caring for her babies and they can be a drain on her body.

Fostering a cat is very rewarding. They may die without the help of some very special people. You are that very special person.

I want to thank all of you who have fostered for me in the past and hope you will consider doing it again this season.
